KNOWLEDGE • REPRESENTATION • COMMUNITY

Linking all arts—not just “the arts”—with “creativity” has tested well across the political spectrum as has shifting away from “arts and culture.”

Strength, economic and otherwise—of individuals, families, communities, states and nation—is a core priority for policymakers, especially conservatives.

Arts and creativity make us stronger—as individuals, families, communities, states and as a country.

They are a backbone of innovation, prosperity, and thriving people and places. Public funding for arts and creativity is a high-return investment that benefits every American in every city, town and rural community nationwide.

Innovation, prosperity, and community—along with strength—emerged as key values in motivating policymaker support for public funding across sectors.

Focusing on the dividends paid to all of America, including rural communities, is crucial in making an effective case for public funding, and is a message that resonates across the political spectrum.

Framing public funding as a smart, effective, highly leveraged investment is key in lawmakers' own arguments and performs well in message testing.
